For $1.50 You Can Buy More Vegetables and Fruit Than

You Can Carry.

By Sophie Irene Loeb. This is what I hought yesterday in he open market for $1.50, enough fresh foodstuffs to keep a family of our for nearly a week:

I talked with the farmer that brought the produce to the market, as well as the dealers who bought from him wholesale. They were satisfied. was satisfied, the produce being as sice as any I had seen and about 30 per cent, lower than that at the stores in my district, and yet there are those who say, "Stop the markets." Why?

There has not yet been any good argument advanced except by commission merchants and middlemen, who are naturally "affected" by the markets. Comptroller Prendergast, I inderstand, advances his objections on the grounds that there is no revenue from them.

The Comptroller evidently forgets that a revenue of $238,479.68 was taken from the License Bureau and put into the Sinking Fund last year. which revenue includes licenses of pushcarts and markets.

The highest courts of the country have held that the money received for censes may be only used for regulations and maintenance of the business

YYet this money is put into Sinking Fund No. 1, which is used to pay debts of the city prior to January, 1898, and every year this fund is growing less and has a constant surplus. There is and has a constant surplus. There is no reason in the world, legal or humane, why some of this money should not be used toward opening more markets that would be a credit to the city as well as a great saving to thousands of families.

In all the cities of Europe the entire revenue of the License Department is used for the upkeep and constant improvement of that department as well as guarding against violation of these licenses.

There are 1,983 pushcarts now licensed. There are approximately 5,000 pushcarts unlicensed and have been allowed to do business for years.

de business for years.

Why, then, the present outcry against free markets when 5,000 pushcart dealers unlicensed have been roaming the streets and at the same time making it possible for thousands of poor families to obtain food at lower prices than the storckeepers elearner?

You have only to visit any section London to see the success and value free markets. The greatest hard-ip would be endured by the people London if these markets were to the discontinued.

There is nothing more important in the needs of a great city than keeping the foodstuffs as low as possible. These markets, after development, would establish prices, as they do abroad. In other cities of the United States large quantities of eggs and butter and farm products are brought in by trolleys, and the cost is thus materially reduced. Nowhere is the cost of food higher than in New York. The food ceasumption is enormous, and the higher than in New York. The food consumption is enormous, and the progress of distribution and regulation of prices has been less regulated by actual statistics and facts on record than any other city both in this country and Europe.

At the same time the crowds of people that are to-day patronizing the four open markets which are just begining in their development certainly gives evidence that those who father the movement headed by Borough President Marks, who has put forth wery effort to meet the opposition, it illing a long felt want.

About $23,000,000 was paid out in the city budget of last year. There was $500,000 surplus in the Sinking Fund. Why some of this money could not be well used for developing markets so as to reduce the expense of living is not evident. There would be no extra tax to the people and nothing so immediately affects the people as cost of food.

The enermous amount of money obtained by the License Burcau, expenses of which at present are only about one-third of its revenue, should be utilized for just such purposes as open markets.

This fact was strongly pointed out by the late Mayor Gayner to the Board of Estimate when the present taxicab ordinance went into effect, and as a consequence twenty - five inspectors were allotted for the upkeep for that department.

As the License Eureau is operating

As the License Bureau is operating now, there are only twenty-five inspectors in the whole department to cover all the licenses issued for bootblack stands, dance halls, moving picture shows, &c. This matter has been pointed out by The Evening World in an effort to have this money used where it belongs—in the upkeep and to cope with the abuses and viciations of such licenses issued.

When I talked with Ambassador Harrick in Parle recently he said that the most important problem before America to-day was that of bringing the farmer and the consumer in as close relationship as possible, and that this was the means of oreating the great markets and farm credits of the important countries of Europe. The open market is the first step.

Pushed Into Gutter, Dies. Samuel Levine, a cracker dealer, of No. 302 Broome street, got into an argu-nent with a stranger last night near his home and was pushed into the gut-Levine fell on his head and died an hour afterward in Gouverneur Hospital of a fractured skull. Jacob Ritt-man, a saloonkeeper at No. 135 El-dridge street, later gave himself up. Ritt-man said he had pushed a man and the latter had fallen, but he had no idea at the time that the man was injured. On learning that the man was dead he went to the pelice station. LATE, FALLS TO DEATH.

The failure of an alarm clock was the Greenberg, who fell to-day from the fifth story window of the tenement at No. 23
Henry street. She was forewoman in an east side shirtwaist factory, and instead of being aroused at 6 o'clock by the alarm the mechanism failed to work and she did not awaken until almost 7 o'clock. This made it necessary for her to hurry to get to work on time, and her mother, Sarah, went out for rolls and other things for breakfast.

As Mrs. Grenberg was delayed, Bessle looked out of the window several times in search of her. The last time she leaned out she fell to the sidewalk. Her mother, almost at the door, saw her fall and ran screaming to her. An ambulance took the girl, who was nineteen years old, to Hudson Street Hospital, but she died ten minutes later. story window of the tenement at No. 33
